AFFAIRS IN BROOKLYN.

THE CHILD'S BODY IDENTIFIED. MARY WERTHEIMER, THE MOTHER, UNMOVED

WHEN SHE SEES IT. The excitement over the brutal murder of seventeen-year-old Mary Werthelmer's three-months-old calld by the young mother's two admirers still runs high among the residents of "Dutchtown," All day yesterday a All day yesterday a large and excited crowd filled the sidewalks in front of the Stagg st. precinct station, where the body of the child still remains. The body lies in a small wooden box in the corridor of the station-house. Yesterday Coroner Lindsay ordered the mother to be brought from the county jail to identify the body. She was taken to the station-house by Detective Lyons, and when confronted with the hadly decomposed body of her child she looked at it without flinching.

"That's my baby," she said. Her indifference surprised even the police, hardened to crime as they are. It was expected that she would show some signs of sorrow, but she remained calm and unmoved. When it became known to the crowd in front of the station-house that Mary Werthelmer was there many of them began to prepare to stone her when she was brought out to be taken back to the jail. The police, realizing the situation, hurried the young mother into the stable adjoining, where the patrol wagon was pre-She was then placed in the wagon and driver rapidly away, while the crowd hooted and yelled.

The examination of the body shows that the infant was without doubt buried alive, as was confessed by Hass and Schultz, the munderers. The right side of the head was crushed in. This was probably done by the sharp stones east in after the body was thrown into the hole. To-day Haas, schultz and Mary Werthelmer will be brought from the jail for examination before Justice Goetting. The police will take every precaution to prevent any attempt to molest the prisoners.
